Title: Inequality, Opportunities and Choices

Concept Note:

Economists have been discussing the question of inequality, opportunities and the choices more intensively in the recent years. The issues of social economics, bringing economic research more in the public policies, climate change, neuroeconomics, and role of institutions, international migration, beliefs and choices are being recast with new dimensions. Gender gaps are pronounced in economic research. Inequalities are visible in multiple dimensions and researched. The seminar welcomes original papers from researchers, faculties who have been carrying out research on these issues.
